Welcome to Anchorage, Alaska

Founded in 1915 as a railroad camp, Anchorage has grown into Alaska's largest city and main travel hub. On March 27, 1964, a natural disaster of incredible proportions struck Anchorage and South-central Alaska: the Good Friday earthquake. This earthquake measured 9.2 on the Richter Scale; the largest ever recorded in North America and, because Anchorage lies only 80 miles from the epicenter, damages to structures ran to the hundreds of millions of dollars. Today, Anchorage constitutes of more than 40 percent of the state's total population; only New York has a higher percentage of residents who live in the state's largest city. Anchorage is bordered to the east by the Chugach foothills, to the west by Cook Inlet, to the south by Potter Marsh and to the north by World War II military bases. While enjoying this pedestrian friendly city, you may spot a free roaming moose or sight an occasional bear roaming on some of Anchorage's bike trails.

SHUTTLE INFORMATION

Guests are not permitted to walk through the port area. The local Port Authority offers a complimentary shuttle service starting at 9:00am, taking guests from the pier to the Egan Center in downtown Anchorage (approximately a 10 minute ride). The last shuttle will depart the Egan Center at 8:30pm returning to the ship.

Shuttle buses are operated by a non-Holland America Line service. Scheduling and timing of buses cannot be guaranteed.
